

War, Terrorism, and Revolution in China, 1900-1950

Professor Sheehan

The first half of the twentieth century in China witnessed almost constant warfare that ranged from peasant unrest and revolution to China's involvement in World War II. This course will examine a number of primary and secondary sources on the period to understand the social, political, and economic impact of violent conflict of all kinds ranging from battlefields to terrorism. Some familiarity with modern Chinese history preferred.

Interested students can email me at bsheehan@wisc.edu